

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Unchallenged political propaganda does not serve the public interest, and in this case appears to be clearly designed to affect the political process with no response allowed from the other side.

Thank you for considering public response to this issue.
